

Mukhtar Hassan, M.D.

Specializing In:

- Hematology
- Medical Oncology

Dr. Hassan joined Clarion Hospital in 2016 practicing hematology & medical oncology.

He began his medical career at Lagos University Teaching Hospital in 1990 where he attended medical school. Completing his residency at Howard University Hospital, Washington, D.C in 2000, he went on to fellowship training at Howard University completing his training in 2006. Dr. Hassan went onto post-fellowship clinical and research in hemostasis and thrombosis at John Hopkins University in 2002-2003.

Dr. Hassan is certified by the American Board of Sub-specialty Medical Oncology, American Board of Medical Sub-specialty Hematology and American Board of Internal Medicine.

To Dr. Hassan, the reward of saving somebody's life is heavier than the weight of the whole universe and its content. Being a medical oncologist is very rewarding, having someone say "thanks doc for saving my life" is indescribable. As physicians we are simply instrumental to deliver the treatment through knowledge God Gave Us. "We care but God Is the sole healer."

It is important to keep the gold standard of care right here in our community so that our patients do not have to travel 1-2 hours to receive the medical services they need.
